

Contents

Introduction (Zsolt Almási, Kinga Földvály)	7
Chapter 1: Raising the (Iron) Curtain: The Heritage of 1989 in the New Europe
Anna Cetera-Włodarczyk / Shakespeare in Purgatory: (Re)Writing the History of the Post-war Reception	17
George Volceanov / Shakespeare on the Page in Romania: Before and After 1989	33
Péter P. Müller / Institutional Structure, Social Function, and the Shakespeare Repertoire in Hungary after 1989–1990	47
Natália Pikli / Institutional Heritage and ‘that Shakespearean hazard’ 1989–2019: The Case of the Katona József Theatre and SzFE’s Ódry Theatre	65
Nicoleta Cinpoes / ‘Shakestivalling’ in the New Europe	83
Chapter 2: (E)Merging Practices in Post-1989 Central European Theatre(s)
Kornélia Deres / Emerging Postdramatic Aesthetics and Shakespeare in Hungarian Theatre	105
Anna Kowalcze-Pawlik / Meaningless Acts: Migratory Aesthetics in Krzysztof Warlikowski’s and Paweł Miśkiewicz’s Dystopian Adaptations of The Tempest	121
Jacek Fabiszak / Maja Kleczewska’s 2019 HAMLET/TAMLET: A Case of Trans-/Inter-cultural Shakespeare Production in Poland Thirty Years after the Transition	139
Gabriella Reuss / Shakespeare in the Post-1989 Hungarian Puppet Scene	151
Ivona Mišterová / Mission (Im)Possible? Cross-Gendered Shakespeare on Czech Stages after 1989	171
Chapter 3: Performing Power and Identity
Šárka Havlíčková Kysová / Singing in the Blend: Stagings of Verdi’s Operatic Shakespeare in the Czech Republic after 1989	189
Jana Wild / Macbeth, Petty Bourgeois	209
Zsolt Almási / Textuality, Heritage, and Identity in Hungary: Contexts for the Interpretation of Szikszai’s Insertion in Macbeth (2018)	222
Kinga Földvály / Reappropriations of Shakespearean History on the Post-Communist Hungarian Stage	239